

Why you absolutely need an informative Legal Nurse Consultant

If your case involves health-related issues, a Legal Nurse Consultant (LNC) should be one of the first professionals consulted. We develop health-related matters in the case, so the legal staff can devote time and resources to legal matters. We have comprehensive education and experience to recognize negligence, tampering or fraud in records. Many attorneys use nonclinical staff to summarize medical records, and physicians to consult on health-related matters. We are readily available and devote more time to your case than a physician.

An LNC is trained to see health-related matters from an insider's point of view. We coach clients on specific nursing issues in cases. We know how to read and analyze records. Understanding terminology can be impossible if you are not familiar with the industry. LNCs know exactly what should be included in the record. We easily interpret and understand physicians' and nurses' notes. The key is that we highlight what may be missing from records based on experience and training. Non-medically trained staff going over records will miss this. LNCs notice missing documents, highlight inconsistencies, and deliver a complete, easily understandable summary of health-related matters. After reviewing records, an LNC evaluates the delivery of healthcare.

LNCs education, experience, and familiarity with hospital protocols and procedures assures you do not miss subtle clues in charts that could unfavorably affect the case. We explore whether the negative outcome at issue was related to the standard of care not being met. LNCs decipher the record into plain English, so it can be better understood all by non-medically trained persons involved with the case. An LNC may provide a report that accounts facts from records or discusses issues with treatment. We can better support the attorney by informing them of strengths and weaknesses of their case from a health-related perspective, something others are not trained to do. We can define deviations from, and adherences to the applicable standards of care. An LNC will determine the arguments for, and against, the finding that the standard of care was met. LNCs deliver uncompromising quality and cost-effective advantages to the attorneys that utilize their skill sets. Call us at 1 (844) LNC-KRUG today.
